WHERE IT STANDS

(Editorial in the Albuquerque Morn ing Journal May 3, 1911). ALL ON THE Q. T.

It appears that the recent performance of the democratic delegation in Washington was decided upon at the meeting of the executive committee of the party held in the city on April

This was a secret session, it will be remembered. All attempts to secure information as to what the committee did were met by the statement from the secretary that it was "nothing of interest to the general public," merely matters pertaining to the statehood situation which the committee didn't care to give out.

Nothing of interest to the general public"-and yet in carrying out the instructions of this committee's star chamber session, Mr. Fergusson, before the house committee, asserted that he "reflected the wishes of New Mexico.

When it comes to such an important function as holding the mirror mp to public sentiment in New Mexico, wouldn't you think it might be of some interest to the general public, to know about it beforehand?

Were the democrats afraid to let the people of New Mexico know what they were going to do until it became public in Washington?

When you are going to reflect the wishes of the people, isn't it the part of wisdom to take the people into your confidence?

The cold fact of the matter is that a number of members of the executive committee planned this attack od without the kowledge of their own party or any other party. It was a secret move from first to last. Knowing what would be the inevitable result, the committee memers and the delegation itself dared not breath a word of their plans bepre going to Washington, Haven't we heard some of these ame gentlemen declaiming about 'gang rule" in New Mexico?
